

IN SOCIETY.

Twenty-Fifth Anniversary.

Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Lyons entertained the ladies of the Non-Script Club, and their husbands, last evening, in celebration of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Mrs. Chas. Speelman, of Columbus, an ex-member of the club, and Miss Rebecca Robison, of Sugar Grove, were guests.

Twice Five.

Mr. H. J. Woodworth, of Haydenville, was host of the Twice Five Club, Monday evening, at the Depot Hotel. On the subject of the evening—Good Roads—excellent papers were read by Dr. Rannells and Mr. John Dougherty, and the usual general discussion followed. Visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Homer Stiers and daughter, Miss Nellie, of Haydenville, and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Elsie.

Entertains With Euchre.

Mrs. J. B. Lyons gave a charming euchre party at her home on West Main, Friday evening. Six tables were filled, and the contest for the prizes was exciting. Mrs. C. F. Applin won first honors, and received a beautiful china plate; the second prize a hand-made lace handkerchief, was awarded Mrs. A. K. Smith. Two courses of light refreshments were served.

Sophomores Receive.

The annual reception to the Freshman Class of the Logan High School was given by the Sophomores, last Friday evening, at the home of Miss Eulah Bort. Two interesting mental contests, devised for the occasion, excited keen competition; the prize winners were Miss Carme Starkey and Mr. Willis McManigal. Late in the evening refreshments of ice cream, cake, and punch, were served. Besides about fifty pupils, Misses Bowly, Harrington, and Dollison were present, and complimented the class highly on the appointments of the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Beck entertained with pedro this evening.

Narrow Escape.

The first flash of news from the stricken city of San Francisco, brought with it anxious fear mingled with hope to the heart of many mothers in the United States, and so was the dread of what might have happened and did happen to hundreds, sunk in the heart of a mother in Logan, by name Mrs. Culver Smith. She heard the first news of the fallen city, and knowing that her son Arthur was there, she spent several sleepless nights before, at last the telegram came, "I have but my life and four dollars," signed, Art.

This son is now at home, and his experience was a terrible one. He was in the railroad business, and lived in a furnished room in a large building in the heart of the city. He was awakened at daylight on that memorable day by the rocking of his bed. The shaking grew more violent until a large mirror swung like a pendulum. The dresser and table and chairs all piled in a heap on the floor. He clung to the bed. With a sudden rise and fall of the building all was quiet again, the quake having lasted about one minute. Art dressed himself quickly, and forced his way down the back stairs and into the street which was one mass of debris.

Suffering was on all sides, and the young man set to work to assist in the rescue work. A lady next door had both lower limbs broken, and her child an awful wound in the face. Art assisted them to safety and staunching the blood from the wound of the child. Seeing them as comfortable as possible he hurried across the street to lift a heavy beam that pinned down a woman, and as he removed the timber, a piece of cornice from the building fell, striking him across the face, rendering him insensible. Soon recovering he rushed on and on in the work to help others, and day and night passed in hunger. The next day he ate of canned goods to his sorrow, for by it he was poisoned and took violently sick to delirium, and found himself on recovering in an improvised shed hospital in some ones back yard. The house where he had roomed, had burned. As soon as he was able to reach Oakland, he wired his mother, and later started home, thankful to be alive.

New Bridge.

The placing of the new double-track iron bridge of the Hoeking Valley, Sunday, was watched by several hundred interested residents. The bridge had been completed on the upper side of the old one, and after the morning train had passed over the latter, a force of nearly one hundred men was set at work to change the positions of the two great steel structures.

Temporary platforms on piles had been constructed on which to place the old bridge. A stationary ten horse-power engine was on each side of the river, to furnish power, and road engine No. 22 was in reserve north of the river. A triple system of block and tackle was rigged, one passing under each end of the old bridge, and one under the middle. At ten o'clock the ropes tightened and the mass slowly moved southward. At 10:15, when about eight feet of the distance had been accomplished, a wire cable attached to the middle snapped, necessitating a delay of a few minutes. When this was repaired, the work went merrily on, and in a short time the large iron hooks were carried up and fastened to the new and larger bridge. No further mishaps occurred, and by 11:30 the new bridge was safely in position, and all efforts being bent toward laying and connecting the tracks. This was provisionally accomplished in time for passenger train No. 37, with Engineer Pete O'Connor, of Columbus at the lever.

The new bridge was made by the Mt. Vernon Bridge Company, from designs by Engineer W. M. Michael, of Columbus. It measures 180 feet in length, and is 30 feet wide; the massive floor-beams, of which there are fifteen, weigh four tons each, the total weight of the iron work reaching 325 tons. With the additional weight of the cross-ties, rails, etc., the total weight is increased to 380 tons. The cost of the structure is nearly $18,000. Mr. Thomas McDonough, of Lancaster, Superintendent of Bridges and Buildings, was in charge of the work.

The old bridge will be dismantled and set up again at Beaman.

It is a mistake to suppose that cyclones or tornadoes are confined to any particular locality. Every portion of the United States east of the Rocky Mts., is subject to such storms and some of the most destructive have occurred in Ohio. Protect your property against wind storms, cyclones and tornadoes by taking out storm insurance with W. W. McCray & Son, Logan, Ohio.

Our New Minister.

Denman Thompson and Geo. W. Ryer's character comedy, "Our New Minister", direct from its record breaking 7 months New York run, will be presented at the Opera House Thursday May 10. This is the first play dealing entirely with New England country life that the authors of "The Old Homestead" have produced since that dramatic evergreen first saw the light of day nineteen years ago. "Our New Minister" is a distinct novelty and one that will doubtless hold the stage for a long time to come. Both Mr. Thompson and Mr. Ryer found the subject an easy one to write upon, but the chief difficulty lay in fitting it to the public mind, which is as changeable as a thermometer and very hard to please. The scene is laid in a small country town known as Hardersville, N. H., and the character drawings are from life. It will be presented by the original New York all star cast, and with a superb scenic production.

Insure to day against cyclones and fire. Delay is Dangerous. Tomorrow MAY BE TOO LATE. Rates reasonable. Call on W. W. McCray & Son, Logan, Ohio. Office—3rd., door west of Rochester's Store.

Saw the Circus.

Mr. A. C. Sands was mentor and chaperon of a select party of Logan gentlemen at Robinson's Circus in Lancaster, Saturday. Mr. Sands and John Robinson, Jr. were boys together, and the latter issued carte blanche privileges to his old friend. After faring sumptuously in the official dining tent, the party was escorted by a brass band to specially upholstered grand-stand chairs under a canopy of red, white and blue, where Mr. Sands did the honors as host during the display of arenic talent and the Utopian gigantism exhibition. The party was composed of Sheriff George Williamson, Ex-Sheriff James Thomas, County Treasurer Mel Harbaugh, and Messrs. Frank Rose and Thad Allen.

New Firing Squad.

The first meeting of the new firing squad for Decoration Day was held Monday evening, and an organization made. New guns have been purchased recently for use by the squad, and uniforms are now being secured. The membership is as follows: Messrs. Ed. Beck, Porter Price, Jas. L. Martin, Jr., Fred Naile, Frank Adcock, Earl Butin, Frank Thurness, J. W. Gabriel, Orla Wright, Lewis Hartmann, Rolland Bright and Ed. Tritsch. One more will be had to make the full complement of thirteen.

Thousands of buildings have been wrecked and property to the value of millions of dollars destroyed every year by Cyclones and Tornadoes. While you cannot prevent the destruction of your property by these cyclones you can provide indemnity against such terrible losses by taking out a policy of insurance in one of our companies. W. W. McCray & Son, Logan, Ohio.

The Big Co-co Horse.

Yellow Bud, Ohio. R. E. Frey, Esq. Logan, O. Dear Sir: Yours of the 20th, received and contents noted. This horse, Co-co, we have imported by M. W. Dunham; is registered in the Percheron Stud Book of France and the United States, and we have both his certificates of registry here. He has always been owned by my father; has had good care and plenty of exercise all his life; is a sure breeder now; not a has-been. He is grey, low down and blocky; fine style and the best actor I ever saw. The best of feet, clean short legs, broad flat bone, and will weigh 1900 pounds. There are plenty of horses that could perhaps be bought cheaper than this fellow could be sold, but what kind of horses are they? Of what value are their colts?

We showed this horse once at the State Fair at Columbus when he was three years old, took the first premium in a class of eighteen. There were horses showed against him that were two hundred pounds heavier than he was at the time, so you see size alone will not win. This horse has sired colts that weighed two thousand pounds. You can here, in a mile of my house, see colts sired by this horse from seven years old down. That surely is worth something to a would-be purchaser. It is only a little ways from Logan to Kinderhook, come and see this horse.

Hoping to see you soon, we are Yours truly,

CAPT. BROWN. R. E. Frey has this famous stallion, Co-co, in the Brown & Son near the jail building, Logan. Come in and see him.

BASE BALL.

Again the plumes of Logan's wings have "sorrowfully trailed in the dust." In the game last Sunday, the Lancaster Goats butted victory out of the home team in a manner astonishing, to say the least. One man was tallied for the visitors in the second inning, and both sides scored goose-eggs from that till the ninth. Up to that time it was a good game, as games go; then it degenerated into something that was—mildly—Punk (with a big P.) The score tells its own story best, and even slopes the honors of the contest to Logan, as a comparison of items shows.

Score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
--	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

Lancaster 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 4—5

Stolen bases: Ayers, Myer, Buntz. Two base hits: Beck. Double plays: Bebout to P. Bowers; G. Bowers to Bebout. Struck out: By Orman, seven; by Livingston, six. Base on balls: Off Orman, one; off Livingston, two. Wild pitch: Orman, one; Livingston, one. Passed ball: Ayers, one. Left on bases: Goats, four; Logan, five. Umpire: C. J. Wagner. Time: 1 hr. 55 min.

The day was fine, and a good crowd witnessed the game.

Orman pitched a good game, although he looked easy. He allowed seven hits, but they were so scattered as to do no harm. The only time he was apparently rattled was when the howling mob surged up to the base lines in the last half. Then he registered a gentle kick.

Camp was in great fielding form, and did something with every chance that came his way. His catch of Bowers' "Texas leaguer," forty feet back of second base, in the third, was a nice bit of work.

Myer's mull of a long fly in center, in the second, was costly; with a wild throw by Stultz immediately afterward, it allowed Bowers to score. Myer has a bad arm from being hit in the game with Nelsonville, and the wind blew rather inconveniently hard when "Beany" made his throw.

In spite of his two wild ones, Stultz did some remarkably pretty throwing from third to first. Four times in the game he nipped doubtful hits by prompt action and good judgment in assisting to first. He seemed to be "havin' 'em" though, in the ninth, when he permitted two grounders that should have been picking for him, to get away.

A quick assist and accurate throw by Buntz, in backing up Stultz on a red-hot grounder, saved the latter player from a bad error in the fourth. Buntz would very probably have scored in the seventh, had he not been miscoached and caught in a double play. He and Myers were the only members of the home team that stole bases; Buntz "snuck" from first to second, in the ninth, while the Goats' third baseman had the ball and was looking at him.

Lytle's error in left was very excusable. He had a run of about sixty feet, and the wind drew the ball steadily away from him. Allen misjudged his one chance in right, and ran under it, the wind no doubt contributing to the mistake.

Beck sent a low fly to right, in the fourth, that was calculated to make the heart of man rejoice. It was well over the fielder's head, and struck the fence with a vengeance. He easily made two bases on it, and got to third on a passed ball. Unfortunately, Stultz, following, fouled to third, Buntz flied to second, and "Shady" fanned. In each of the first four innings Logan got one hit; in the first and third the runner was left at second, and in the second and fourth, at third. The hits could not be bunched.

WELLMAN, STEINMAN & YONTZ

Wagner, the dapper tonsorial artist from the Brunswick, developed as a top-notch in umpiring. His decisions were uniformly fair and impartial, and he knows the game—two essential requisites that are worth much in an umpire. The hope is general that he will be retained for the season.

P. Bowers, Lancaster's third baseman, was the only man on their team that hit safely. He singled twice, and scored twice, but his first run was due to errors. Had not Lytle, in the ninth, sent him a grounder that was too hot to hold, his would have been a star personal score.

Mrs. Anna Sniff, of Columbus, attended the funeral of her uncle, Mr. Milton Gaffney, Monday.

A number of the pupils of the Logan School expect to go to Cleveland tomorrow to attend the oratorical contest. Miss Josephine Henderson represents Logan.

Miss Alice Kuhn returned Wednesday evening from a few days visit with Mrs. Ora Wilson, of Columbus. She was accompanied home by Master Earl Perone who will visit his father, Mr. James Perone.

Father Mattingly, of Lancaster, was in Logan a short time last Thursday.
